SUBJECT: WID FINAL DIRECTIVE PROCESS CHANGE

This information bulletin announces a change in the processing of directives on the Internet. The current Workforce Investment Division (WID) process requires all directives to be published in draft so we can solicit comments from our internal and external customers. In preparing the final directive, staff considers all comments and makes changes to the draft directive. With the new process, staff will take an additional step to highlight substantive content changes in the final directive. The highlighted sections will reflect what changed in the final directive from the draft. The highlighted copy of the final directive will remain on the Internet for 30 days from the date of issuance. After the 30 days, the highlighting will be removed from the copy on the Internet. The new process will take effect November 1, 2005.
